

Natasha Freimark
612.336.9207 – work
612.741.0787 - cell
nfreimark@mspmag.com

Mpls.St.Paul Magazine's January issue is packed with everything that makes the Twin Cities one of the most entertaining places to live. From unique foods and hangouts to stylish social events, see why Minnesota residents love to live here. Here are some highlights that would make great fodder for your audience:

COVER STORY: Wake Up for Breakfast

Our critics serve up a high stack of pancakes, pastries, brunches, bloody marys, and more. See their picks for morning eats that will start your day off on the sunny side of life.

FEATURE: Thinking Outside the Thin Blue Line

Minneapolis Police Chief Janee Harteau brings a fresh approach to her new job as top cop. After a series of troubles for the department, she may be just what Minneapolis needs.

FEATURE: Front & Center

Some kids are born different. They are born for the stage.

Read the story of a place that makes sure its disabled clients get their chance to be in the spotlight.

TRAVEL: A North Star State approach to touring Washington, D.C.

SHOPPING + STYLE: Shopping & Style editor Allison Kaplan resolves to shop smarter this year.

EAT + DRINK: Food & Dining editor Steph March on The Lynn on Bryant.

NEW! PRESSROOM: Check out our new online pressroom, where all of our press releases, media clips and bios of our editors live. Visit mspmag.com/About-Us/Pressroom for more information.

Let us make your job easier! Our editorial team stays ahead of the people, places, and things that are defining life in the Twin Cities and are available to bring these topics (and others) to life in your programming. Please contact Marketing & Events Director, Natasha Freimark (at nfreimark@mspmag.com or (w) 612.336.9207, (c) 612.741.0787) to schedule an appearance of one of our team for an upcoming show.

Best,

Jayne Haugen Olson
Editorial Director
Mpls.St.Paul Magazine
612.336.9272
jolson@mspmag.com